AUSTRIAN GOVERNMENT COLLAPSES

GLEAVES ON WAY TO VLADIVOSTOK; WILL INVESTIGATE LANGDON MURDER

American Admiral, On Destroyer, Arrives At Woosung Today

BOARDING NEW ORLEANS

To Go North On Cruiser; Japanese Fired First Shot, Wires Say

Admiral Albert Gleaves, commander in chief of the Asiatic Fleet, United States Navy, is expected to arrive at Woosung this evening from Manila on the U.S.S. destroyer Hart, accompanied by his staff. It is expected that Admiral Gleaves will board the U.S.S. New Orleans at Woosung and will proceed direct to Vladivostok to investigate the murder of Lieutenant W. S. Langdon of the U.S.S. Albany, who was shot Saturday night by a Japanese soldier and died aboard the Albany at Vladivostok on Sunday afternoon.

The New Orleans will sail from Shanghai this afternoon and is to meet the Hart at Woosung this evening. The fast destroyer, capable of a sea speed of 38 knots, left Manila Tuesday night and thus makes Woosung this afternoon. The U.S.S. Rizal, a sister ship, travelled the 1,196 miles between Manila and Shanghai in less than 40 hours and the destroyers can run 30 knots an hour without any difficulty.

TO ARRIVE SUNDAY

The New Orleans started coaling at 6 o'clock yesterday morning and established a record by filling the bunkers in a little over three hours. Food and supplies were taken aboard and everything is ready for the trip North.

Admiral Gleaves should reach Vladivostok Sunday morning on the New Orleans.

No further details of the shooting of Langdon were received here yesterday. Naval officers believe that the Japanese soldier who fired the fatal shot mistook the American naval officer for some one else.

JAP FIRED FIRST

According to further advices received from Vladivostok Langdon was shot sometime after midnight as he was returning to his ship. All the messages state that the Japanese soldier fired at Langdon first and then he replied. The shooting took place near the building formerly occupied by the American Expeditionary forces which is now used as Japanese headquarters.

Naval officers here say that Langdon was a crack shot with a pistol or revolver and scout the idea that he fired first. "Had he fired first, he would have killed the Japanese," several officers and enlisted men said.

JAPANESE VERSION

The following, published in an afternoon paper, is ostensibly the Japanese version of the affair and was sent out from Tokio:

A Vladivostock telegram says:

At about 4:20 a.m. on January 8, in front of the headquarters of the 11th Division on Peter the Great Road at Vladivostok, while a sentry was on guard, a foreigner passed there and used a pocket electric light towards the headquarters and the sentry, which made the sentry suspicious of his acts. The sentry shouted to him to stop in the Russian language three times, and as he did not stop the sentry followed him for twenty to thirty meters and then again shouted and asked him whether he was a Russian or American, in Russian language, but he placed his right hand in his pocket and produced something and walked towards the sentry. The sentry retreated two or three steps and showed an attitude of resistance. The foreigner fired a shot of his revolver and the sentry fired a shot. The foreigner tried to run away and the sentry fired another shot. Another soldier in the headquarters who heard the shots came out to help his comrade and saw a revolver and something he thought to be drops of blood.

In the morning the Commander of the United States ship Albany called on the headquarters, by which it was found for the first time that the said foreigner was Lieutenant Langdon, the Chief Engineer of the ship Albany.

Six Fighting Councillors Are Swept Into Office By Record Vote In Frenchtown

Men Pledged To Stand Against Tramways Co. Get Big Majorities; Heavy Foreign Vote

Turning out in unprecedented strength the voters of the French Concession yesterday swept into office by a topheavy majority the candidates for the Council who have taken an aggressive stand against the Compagnie Francaise de Tramways et d'Eclairage Electrique, registering in emphatic style the community's attitude on the public utilities controversy.

The feature of the election was the enthusiastic response of the non-French voters, principally British and American, who have previously displayed little interest in the French Municipal elections but who yesterday went to the polls in great numbers. The total vote cast was 492. Last year the ballot was 148, confined almost entirely to the French ratepayers.

BIG MAJORITIES GIVEN

The successful candidates for the French seats on the Council—the only ones in contest—were Mr. R. Fano, who received 436 votes; Mr. P. Mailly, with 408 votes; and Dr. E. Tartois, 390. Mr. A. Arnaud-Coste and Mr. L. Pernot, the unsuccessful candidates, received 85 and 81 votes respectively.

The foreign candidates, who had no opposition, were elected by the following vote: Mr. W. J. N. Dyer, 461, Mr. Hugh Martin, 451, and Mr. M. Speelman, 447.

Mr. Fano and Mr. Mailly and Mr. Dyer and Mr. Martin, receiving the highest number of ballots, are elected for two-year terms. The others serve for one year. Mr. Fano and Mr. Dyer are re-elected members of the Council.

SUPPORTERS ARE ELATED

The Frenchtown ratepayers also voted yesterday for the Land Commission for the Concession, naming Messrs. Ch. Barriere, F. Sallou, A. L. Anderson and Albert Jost to serve.

The leaders in the fight against the French tramways company received the results of the election with much elation last night. All of the elected candidates have pledged to carry on the campaign against the company and the outcome, following their appeal for the support of the community, is taken as an indication of practically solid backing by the ratepayers.

IRISH EMISSARY NOT ALLOWED TO LAND AT SYDNEY

De Valera Denies Charges Of Sinn Fein Plot With Germans

(Reuter's Service)

Sydney, Jan. 11.—Mr. Osmond Esmonde, heir of Sir Thomas Esmonde, has not been allowed to land here from the steamer Makura.

He claims that he is engaged on a highly important diplomatic mission in connection with Irish Home Rule. He will probably be deported.

Sir Thomas Esmonde, Bart., is a well-know Catholic landowner in County Wexford. He was M. P. for County Dublin, (South), 1885-91, and for West Kerry, 1891-1900.

He is a great traveler and sportsman, and is well-known in Australia and the South Seas. He was appointed a Chamberlain of the Vatican Household in 1898.

London, Jan. 11.—With regard to the disclosures made in a recent White Paper regarding Sinn Fein intrigue with Germany during the war, De Valera has issued a statement, denying the existence of any pro-German plot in 1918. He declares that the whole object of publishing the documents in question is to revive war-time hatreds and prejudices.

Washington, January 12.—The Acting Secretary of State, Mr. Davis, has formally requested the Department of Labor to deport Mr. O'Callaghan, the Lord Mayor of Cork.

Florists and other business men are disappointed over the quiet character of the celebration.

THREE MONTHS FOR SAILOR WHO SHOT COMRADE

Paul Rossi Sentenced By French Court; Is Also Fined

Paul Rossi, sailor from the French ship Commandant Marges who shot a comrade, Alfonse Consic, following a quarrel in Boone Road on January 1, has been sentenced to three months' imprisonment and fined 50 francs by the French Consular Court. Rossi, admitted the shooting but claimed that it was done in self-defense. He appeared before Mr. Auge for trial.

Consic is still in St. Mary's Hospital, where he was taken after the trouble, but is reported out of danger.

The quarrel which culminated in the shooting started on the afternoon of the first in the Naval Club cafe on Bocne Road near the Seward Road corner when Consic danced with a woman who was sitting with Rossi and two others at another table. When the men left the cafe the quarrel was resumed and, according to the defendant, Consic rushed upon him and in fear of his life he drew a .22 calibre automatic pistol and fired, the bullet striking his assailant at the right side of the abdomen. Rossi told the police that after the shooting he threw the pistol into the Hongkew Creek. He then went back to the ship and reported the affair to the captain, who turned him over to the French police when a detective was sent aboard.

A ricsha coolie who reported the fight to a Chinese Police Constable of the Settlement force said that all of the men had weapons. All of the man had been drinking and the evidence in the case was not very clear on either side.

MACKAY WANTS GERMAN CABLES IN PRE-WAR USES

France Is Warned That Her Control Will Be Opposed By U. S.

FAVOR ALLIED OWNERS

Britain, Italy And Japan Said To Be In Favor Of Compromise

(Reuter's Service)

Washington, Jan. 11.—Mr. C. H. Mackay, President of the Postal Telegraph and Cable Company, giving evidence before the Senate Committee on International Communications, argued that the cables between Germany and the United States should be returned to their prewar uses.

Washington, Dec. 11, (By mail).—A new crisis has arisen in the controversy between the United States and foreign powers over the disposition of German cables, and it is understood that notice has been served on the French Government that if it insists upon control of the former German cable from Germany to the United States, permission to land it on American territory will be refused.

DIVERTED TO BREST

When the German cable was seized France diverted it to Brest. The United States has taken the position, which it has strongly emphasised in the International Communications Conference, that the former German cables should remain under the joint control of allied nations. The attitude of France is declared to be the principal obstacle to an agreement regarding the disposition of this German cable, as all the other powers represented in the conference—Great Britain, Italy and Japan—are inclined to be sympathetic with the position of the United States.

The fact that the communications conference is continuing is taken as an indication that its differences can be ironed out.

In deciding to stand by the Wilson Administration in its course with reference to the disposition of the Yap and other German cables the Republican Committee on Foreign Affairs of the Senate has strengthened the Government in its dealings with foreign Governments.

Norman H. Davis, Acting Secretary of State, and the senior member of the American delegation in the communications conference, said today that the controversy between the United States and Japan over the Yap cable landing was not a deterrent to agreement in the conference. The conference, he said, could complete its work without a settlement of the Yap controversy.

HOPES FOR EARLY ACTION

Mr. Davis added that he was hopeful that the communications conference will come to a settlement in the near future.

The exchanges of views between this Government and Great Britain on the status of Yap have not been concluded. Japan is represented in an informed quarter as being prepared to accept the views of the United States with regard to Yap, provided other mandatory nations give up their claims to exclusive rights in mandated territory. It is asserted that Japanese subjects who have been established in various lines of business in the former German islands in the South Pacific have been driven out by the Australian and New Zealand authorities, and that Japan does not desire to be singled out as an exception to the rule generally applied.

Daniels Proposes Harding Call For Disarmament Talk

(Reuter's Service)

Washington, Jan. 11.—The Secretary of the Navy, Mr. Daniels, addressing the Naval Committee of the House of Representatives, declared that an international agreement ending competition in naval building was the only alternative to building an American Navy equal in power to any other navy in the world.

If the United States was not immediately to join the League of Nations, President-Elect Harding should immediately invite all the nations of the world to a disarmament conference, and until a world agreement on disarmament was secured, there should be no cessation in building ships authorised by Congress.

NATIVES SLAIN AS RIOTS SPREAD AT RAI BARELI

Attempts Of Landlords To Suppress Soviets Are Cause Of Disorder

(Reuter's Service)

Allahabad, Jan. 11.—There has been bloodshed in the Rai Bareli district of the United Provinces as the result of the agrarian riots, and armed police have been ordered there.

The trouble is believed to have originated in attempts on the part of the landlords to supress soviets established by the tenants who allege that they are denied certainty of tenure and are forced to submit to illegal extortions.

Later.—It appears that a large crowd attacked a bazaar near Rai Bareli and became so threatening that an officer ordered the police to fire. Four natives were killed and two wounded, and several arrests made.

Later.—The police are powerless to stop the riots which have spread to Sultanpur, fifty-eight miles North-East of Allahabad, and troops have been summoned from Lucknow.

Six hundred arrests have been made.

Allahabad, Jan. 12.—Official advices from Rai Bareli state that the situation there is now under control.

It is unofficially stated that the trouble is the outcome of a peasant movement under the leadership of Kisam Sabha, organised as a protest against the levying of rates by the landowners.

The disturbances are the result of the arrest of three of the leaders after the Peasant Congress last month. Public meetings are now prohibited in the affected areas.

No Communist Is Returned To Office By French Electors

(French Wireless through Reuter)

Paris, Jan. 11.—The French press observes that Sunday's elections have changed the composition of the Senate but slightly. Senatorial elections in France are always essentially agrarian, the newspapers point out, and the French peasant, with his traditional common sense, does not readily go to either extreme.

It is worthy of note that not a single Communist was returned on Sunday.

The only remarkable feature of the election was the evolution toward the Left which occurred at the expense of the Conservatives.

FURBUSH TRIAL OPENS FRIDAY IN U. S. COURT

Strong Effort To Be Made To Save Man Held As Slayer Of Richard Hazelton

After having been postponed from last Monday the murder trial of Henry B. Furbush, the American seaman who is held as the slayer of Richard F. Hazelton, is scheduled to open tomorrow morning in the United States Court for China before Judge C. S. Lobingier.

Some indication has been given that the trial will be protracted and hard fought and while a vast mass of evidence is in the hands of the prosecution which will be conducted by Major C. P. Holcomb, United States District Attorney, it is generally accepted that Messrs. M. L. Heen and L. W. Hartigan, attorneys for Furbush, will make an exhaustive effort on behalf of their client.

DEFENSE SECRETIVE

No indication whatever has been given of what line will be taken by the defense. The charge against the accused is that in shooting Hazelton in the El Dorado Cafe in the Trenches on the night of December 13 he committed the crime "willfully and with malice aforethought" and by the nature of the wording of the indictment the charge brought is a capital offense.

In support of the charge the Government has first the victim's dying statement in making which he definitely identified Furbush as his assailant. This dying statement was sealed after it had been taken at the Shanghai General Hospital and as it was not presented at the preliminary

National Council Proposes To Imprison Unfair Dealers For Ten Years And Impose 5,000,000 Crowns Fines

(Reuter's Service)

London, Jan. 11.—The Times Berlin correspondent telegraphs that a report has reached official quarters there that the Austrian Government has informed the Entente that Austria is at the end of her resources, adding that it is unable to carry on and will retire on January 15 and hand over the administration of the country to the Reparations Commission.

Vienna, Jan. 11.—The seriousness of the high cost of living in Austria was evidenced by the opening of a Government enquiry on the subject today, when Herr Mayer, the Chancellor, said that a bill would be introduced to the National Council, providing ten years' imprisonment and a fine of 5,000,000 crowns as the punishment for profiteers.

The Chancellor said that the great masses of the population who were working their hardest were unable to earn sufficient to procure the barest necessaries. The only remedy was to stabilise the exchange and to increase production, by means of ample foreign credits.

Labor delegates demanded corporal and even capital punishment for profiteers, one railway representative saying that unless drastic measures were taken his comrades would hang profiteers in front of the Bourse.

Health Officer Reports Diphtheria Outbreak And Discovery Of Plague Rats

Outstanding details of the current monthly report of the Municipal Health Officer, published in this week's Municipal Gazette, are the account of an outbreak of diphtheria in a mild form and the finding within the Settlement limits of several plague infected rats.

The report sets forth that in the past month thirty cases of diphtheria among the foreign residents were reported, adding that none resulted fatally and that in general the cases have been found to be mild in form though long infective.

OUTBREAK GENERAL

It is noted that coincident with the appearance of the disease in Shanghai 8,000 cases of diphtheria and scarlet fever are under treatment in London isolation hospitals and a similar incidence has been reported from other large centers of the world. It is pointed out that conditions that give rise to a prevalence of diphtheria also give rise to a prevalence of scarlet fever, but it is reported that the incidence of scarlet fever in the Settlement is very small. Methods of prevention and treatment are outlined in the report.

PLAGUE RATS

Concerning the discovery of plague infected rats the report says the first was discovered on December 20 in a house refuse receptacle outside of No. Lg 674 Dalny Road in the Eastern District in close proximity with the South Manchurian Railway company's wharf.

A second plague infected rat was found on December 31 in another refuse receptacle outside No. J. 1275 Seward Road not far from the Wayside wharf.

MEASURES TAKEN

Continuing the report says:

Since December 1908, when plague-infected rats were first discovered in the Settlement, a daily examination of rats found dead has been made in the Municipal Laboratory.

"Had it not been for this, these rats would not have been discovered and plague might have developed on a large scale. As it is, the available plague prevention staff has been concentrated on these two foci and there is hope that infection may be limited. The partial rat proofing of new buildings required by the Building Rules as well as the very extensive rat-proofing operations carried out in old houses by the Health Office since 1909 should greatly help in securing immunity.

FIRST IN FOUR YEARS

"More is wanted, however, before the Building Rules can be considered adequate in securing rat-proof buildings, not only in the rules themselves but also in the way they are carried out. The Settlement has been entirely free from plague-infected rats for four years until the present discovery was made.

"The finding of these plague-infected rats in proximity to wharves where ships come alongside from ports where plague is known to exist is a precise repetition of December 1908, when the first plague-infected rat was found in Yuenfong Road near the Hongkew Wharves, and is positive proof of their being brought by ships to Shanghai. It again shows, should further demonstration be necessary, the importance of taking adequate steps in freeing ships from rats, especially those which call at ports where plague infection is known to exist.

Encouraged by the generous response of the public at the Hsin Wu Tai Performances, the members are planning to organise a fete at one of the large public buildings sometime next month. In view of the gratifyingly large number of small contributions that have been received, the Association plan to make the admission to the fete low enough to enable all who are charitably disposed to attend it.

Furbush Trial Opens Tomorrow In U. S. Court

hearing its contents will not be made public until it is presented in evidence at the trial.

In addition to this post-mortem statement from Hazelton, the Government has also the testimony of three Chinese cloak room boys of the El Dorado Cafe, all eye witnesses of the shooting. All of these have identified Furbush as the man who used the pistol, though on the occasion of the preliminary hearing they were somewhat contradictory in testifying.

DENIES GUILT

Besides these witnesses, are a number of others, whose names for the most part have not been disclosed, who either took part in or witnessed incidents in the El Dorado ball room that led up to the shooting. It is the testimony of all these witnesses that will raise the obstacles the defense must overcome. Furbush's single statement recorded in court since his arrest was his answer when arraigned denying his guilt of the charge.

Following the shooting the El Dorado Cafe has been dark and a later outcome of the tragedy was the order issued by the Chinese authorities giving all the bar resorts in the Szechuen-Jukong district 30 days in which to close their doors. This period expires February 1.

A COMMON ERROR

About the Digestion

Many people so far misunderstand the digestive system as to treat it like a machine; neglecting it until it works sluggishly, then irritating it into work again. The stomach needs help at times, but a study of the process of digestion will show that purgatives, as commonly taken, are seldom necessary.

To safeguard your digestion the diet must be controlled. Overeating is always harmful, but one must assimilate enough food to supply the needs of the blood. Remember, the blood has to carry nourishment all over the body, and find fuel for its energy. Hence, when the blood becomes weak and fails to do its work, indigestion arises; also, when indigestion begins the blood suffers. Therefore, the treatment of indigestion demands something more effective than purgatives.

If you suffer from any form of indigestion choose your diet carefully and take wholesome nourishment Above all, start building up your blood by taking a course of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Then, under the influence of the regenerated blood, your digestive system will respond naturally, your appetite will improve, and your food will do you good.

Digestive debility has often resulted from the use of purgatives, but only benefit can accrue from regenerating the blood. Begin Dr. Williams' Pink Pills now. You can obtain them of any dealer, or direct and post free, 1 bottle for $1.50, 6 bottles $8 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., 96 Szechuen Road, Shanghai.

Missionaries Describe Earthquake In Kansu District Last December

he following is a letter from . Fa... Edouard Geisler, sionary of the Prefecture of idional Kansu, which gives ils of the earthquake which urred in the district during the nd half of December 1920.
ingyangfu, December 21, 1920.
he first shock occurred on ember 16 about 7:25 in the ning. I was at table, quietly shing my supper. All at once house started to tremble. ntened, I went out to see what happening. The ground seem- like an elastic mass; a wave of ut 10 centimeters high was ng coming from the North-East going towards the South-West; air was filled with a strange e; one had to scream as loud ossible to be heard a few steps y.
his first shock lasted four to minutes; the force of the shock aining the same it seemed to ...ring all this time.
bout 8.10, there was a second k which lasted several seconds; 9.10 another short one; slight ublings were felt several times ing the night and also the next
According to the reports of people and fugitives, about 500 perished in an area of less n 30 kilometers; the majority of victims were buried alive in "miao," caves dug in the sides he mountains and which served heir dwellings.

VE SHOCKS IN DAY

n December 18 there were slight shocks during the day.
n the 19th, people coming from tzeu told me that where they e from the earthquake had been y violent; the swaying was so t that it had been almost impos- e to stand upright. There are 200 dead in this locality.
n the 20th of December there e four shocks during the day.
understand that south of King- gfu there was also great dis- r. The village of Si-tch'a- ng, about 80 li south, must e completely crumbled and the ber of victims will be several dred.
n December 21 there was ther rather severe shock which ed several seconds. I learn regret that 20 christians from mission perished. My residence ituated at Sancheulipou, 35 li h of Kinyangfu, and had been pletely rebuilt less than three s ago. Now the walls are ked and in some parts have n.

ARS COLLAPSE

there are any further shocks I afraid it will collapse.
mming up the information I e received I can state that the hquake was felt 200 li north south of Kingyangfu and 180 li and west. The victims number a thousand. Whole families e disappeared. In all the sur- ding villages, houses are in s, or ready to fall. Finally terrible disaster has taken e in Mid-Winter at a temper- e of at least 25 degrees. Where lodgings for all these poor un- unates be found? Where will resources, urgently necessary to eve the pressing needs of so y poor and to rebuild the ruins, e from?
ay the Good Lord protect us and us generous benefactors; with help we will exert ourselves ulfill in the proper manner our as missionaries, to be the per- al refuge of all those in misery once again we will recommence work.
(Signed) EDOUARD GEISLER.

LGIANS' EXPERIENCES

he following are extracts of rs from Belgian missionaries:
—From Rev. Father Jamart: gchow, December 20:
returned home last night, hav- been to administer the last aments to a Christian, a m of the earthquake. I can give you fuller details of the ster of which I informed you December 17.
December 16 at 7:30 p.m. as in my room when every- g started to tremble. I rushed the open and called to my people uickly leave the houses. These es were shaken and made a e similar to a very loud peal thunder. Standing outside, I swayed in the same manner ship pitches on high seas. This d a minute or more. A wall nd me fell and owing to the t noise I did not hear it.
quarter of an hour later, an- r more feeble shock was felt. exactly eight o'clock a great k, but shorter. During the t altogether about 20 shocks, e greater, some slighter. ral walls of the church fell or ked and a large part must be d down and rebuilt.
the 17th, continual slight ks were felt during the day. At a shock lasted several seconds; t 8 o'clock another. Yesterday rds midnight we had another er severe one.

RICKEN DISTRICTS

he districts which have suffered are: Kingchow, Ngan-how-ino, Chung-sin, Pingliangfu, Chenyuan, Kuyuan, Changwuhsien (Shensi) and as far as Kingyangfu, from where I have not received any news. . . . The houses in the valley or in the center of the plain suffered less. On the borders of the plateaux and the mountain sides the effect was felt more. Many houses and the pagodas have fallen; caves have collapsed, on the mountains, land slides carrying away caves and inhabitants—victims everywhere. The Chinese speak of "wan" (six thousand), I cannot say how many, but there are certainly several hundreds—whole families have disappeared—Among the Christians, thanks be to God, there were but few victims, but several are without shelter and have nothing to eat. All have been buried.

No one remembers such a disaster—Koang-sin, 5th year, was nothing as compared with this earthquake. One dares not sleep, but overcome by fatigue, however, one falls asleep, for many sleepless nights have been passed. These three terrible days will never be forgotten!

TERRIBLE COLD

On the 17th, about 10 p.m. a formidable wind arose (hwang feng, or hoi feng) which blew the whole of the 18th. The cold was terrible.

The lower part of the town of Kingchow suffered less. The elevated districts, where there are caves, suffered more and there were numerous victims.

Roads in many places have disappeared, others are full of debris.

The number of destroyed pagodas is remarkable, I think because these were mostly built on prominent points.

On the border of the plateau, so people say, houses were seen to rise and fall. Trees bent down to the ground and rose again.

The frightened animals ran away, horses and mules broke their halters and fled, fearstricken birds flew everywhere.

The earthquake seems, to me to be traveling from northwest to southeast, for I noticed that the wall behind my room had commenced trembling, then the one in front; out of doors I felt the same movement.

Is it over? Let us hope that the Good Lord will preserve us from further misfortune. Whether it is imagination or a reality, one seems to be on a hollow space which sways from time to time.

AT KINGCHOW

2.—From Rev. Father Jamart: Kingchow, December 30:

Until today there have been more or less severe shocks. On the 25th of December at 6:45 in the evening a severe shock lasted about two minutes, on the 28th, about 10:30 there was a rather severe one of about fifteen seconds. Night before last again, about five minutes; a slight cracking of buildings.

On the other side of Koanchan it seems to have been more terrible than on this side. The cart road, cannot be used between Hweining and Antingkan. Telegraphic communication has been cut off. At Kuyuan, we hear, a lake of blackish water has formed.

Thousands of dead are reported from Tsinchow, seven out of every ten houses have fallen and whole villages have disappeared.

Our residences there have sustained great damage but there were not many victims.

TSINCHOW REPORT

3.—From Rev. Father Popelier: Tsinchow, December 23:

The shocks still continue, usually three or four during the day and two or three a night. The longest lasted for a minute and a half. Every day houses fall. In the town alone there are over 400 dead, in the sub-prefecture of Tsinchow there are from 5,000 to 6,000. Of a village an hour's distance away, nothing but ruins remain.

All our houses here have suffered much; our residence of Fukiang has suffered even more than the one here. The buildings of Kanchu must be completely rebuilt. The church, however, is still in good condition, also the missionary's room. At Ysing-shui and Sanyangchoan terrible damage was done to our houses.

I shall never forget the night of the 16th of December. One would have thought that the earth was going to open and swallow everything; and then our big clock started striking, moved by invisible hands . . . it was gruesome!

I think there must have been some volcanic eruptions in this region, otherwise I cannot imagine how these earthquakes could last for so many days.

HOUSES ARE RAZED

The majority of our christians are without houses. The town is in ruins, even the city walls are cracked. Black misery pervades everywhere!

If such a calamity had occurred in Europe, relief committees would immediately be formed, charitable societies would be organised, etc., etc. but here we are far away, the world does not worry about our poor unfortunates . . . they are only Chinese! . . .

They are nevertheless men, they have wives and children, they also love life and they can also suffer.

We will do all we can to help: we have full confidence in Holy Providence; all our griefs have been allowed by the Good Lord, it is he also who will come to our aid now!

United States Formally Declines To Take Part In Ambassadors' Conference

(Reuter's Service)

Paris, Jan. 11.—The United States Ambassador, Mr. Hugh C. Wallace, yesterday informed the Premier, M. Leygues, that his Government had decided to withdraw from the Ambassadors' Conference and that it would not take part in the meeting of the Supreme Council here on the 19th instant.

It is pointed out, semi-officially, that the United States Government's decision is pure'y a matter of form, inasmuch as so far back as in December, 1919. America had notified that her Ambassador at Paris was no longer qualified to join in the Allies' deliberations and that thenceforward he would only attend as an onlooker.

The present step is an act of political etiquette on the part of President Wilson who does not wish to bind the United States to any policy, seeing that President-Elect Harding will take over the reins of power in a few weeks when he will define his attitude toward the Treaty of Versailles. At the same time the United States will continue to be represented on the Rhine and Reparations Commissions.

Germanophil propagandists have insinuated that America's decision is the result of the alleged intention of France to occupy the Ruhr basin. Such slanderous suggestions are categorically refuted in official quarters. It is emphasised that France has never intimated any such intention to the Allies.

Mr. Wallace gave the following explanation of his Government's decision. He said that the United States had withdrawn from the Ambassadors' Conference because the questions specially interesting her had now been settled and the United States did not think it advisable to be further represented on the Conference, in view of her non-ratification of the Treaty of Versailles. He emphasised, however, that America considered that the Treaty engagements ought to be carried out.

Lord Reading In Farewell Address To Bar At London

(Reuter's Service)

London, Jan. 11.—Replying to the congratulations of the Bar on his appointment as Viceroy of India, which were voiced by the Attorney-General Sir Gordon Hewart, K. C., in the High Court this morning in the presence of Judges, Lords of Appeal, leading barristers and many members of the public, Lord Reading, greatly moved, said that he did not propose to guess the reasons for his selection as Viceroy, seeing that he had no knowledge in India, but would abide by the assertions of those who were competent to judge.

"I leave the Judicial Bench," he remarked, "not forsaking or abandoning the pursuit of justice, but rather pursuing it in larger fields but upon a road that is not so certain or well laid.

"In the law-courts a man is limited by the facts and evidence before him, whereas in politics he has not all the factors always before him until, perhaps, long after he has given his decision."

Lord Reading said that he was going to India with the sole desire to do right, and he believed that he could not fail.

Porter defeated Captain E. I. M. Barrett in the final of the championship a year ago at the Masonic Club after defeating Charlie Komaroff in the semi-final match.

The commmittee of the Billiards Association in charge of the tournament includes Captain E. I. M. Barrett, and Messrs. W. Campbell, T. Poignand, J. W. Prince, J. McKay and Alvarez.

Sports Correspondence

Sporting, Editor, THE CHINA PRESS

Dear Sir.—As a disinterested spectator of the Basket Ball game at the Y.M.C.A. on Tuesday night, between the "Country Club" and the "Reds" I would like to make a protest at what appeared to me the unsportsmanlike attitude of the "Club" Captain.

I noticed several times in each half he retired his men at intervals replacing them in each instance with a fresh player, and, en passant, permit me to say the same thing happened at the Rowing Club last Saturday. Now this seems to me exceedingly unfair, inasmuch as the opposing teams played their men through.

I am quite aware there is a rule governing this, and having read it, I am of opinion that it is quite open to another interpretation, and perhaps this protest emanating from one who is a new arrival in Shanghai (and is not a citizen of the U.S.A. to boot) will provide an opening for a discussion of this rule, whereby a player can be retired at the discretion of his captain for no other reason than being "winded" and replaced by a fresh man during play.

Once a team takes the field, the same team should finish the game, excepting accidents.

Yours truly,
"FAIRPLAY."

HUGGINS MEN TO START WORK ON MARCH 1st

Usual Series With Dodgers Will Open On April 2; Giants To Play The Indians

The Yanks will train at Shreveport, La., close to where Charles Dryden, the noted Chicago Walton, does his spring and winter fishing. This news leaked out from the Chamber of Commerce at Shreveport, which could not keep the secret. Ed Barrow, the secretary of the Yankees, has been guarding the secret carefully.

Bob Connery, the ivory hunter of the Yanks, has been in the fated Louisiana burg for some days looking over the ground. He wired Barrow that the bass were biting and that on the whole the place was not any worse than any other spring training camp. Whereupon Barrow wired back to close with the local club for the lease of the grounds.

The Yanks will be assembled at Shreveport on March 1, and will remain in their camp until on or about April 2, when they will start to work back into civilisation. The Yanks as usual will play a series of spring exhibition games with the Brooklyn Dodgers.

Connery is now in New Orleans to try to locate the Dodgers in that city, which they can leave to pick up the Yanks in time for the raid through the sticks. The Dodgers trained at Jacksonville with the Yanks for the last two years and were anxious to return to the old base, but Manager Miller Huggins had reached the decision that there was some sort of subtle jinx in Jacksonville for the Yanks and insisted on new pasturage. The Dodgers started in the same city and won the National League pennant.

Wilbert Robinson, the manager of the Dodgers, said when last seen that he did not care where he trained. He is now engaged in an effort to exterminate all the ducks in Chesapeake Bay, and the list of casualties indicates that he may succeed.

Joseph D. O'Brien, secretary of the New York Giants, announced that the Giants probably would meet the world's champion Indians in two exhibition games this spring at Dallas, Tex. Tris Speaker wrote asking for games on March 19 and 20. These dates were agreed upon tentatively pending the arrival of John J. McGraw from Cuba.

Big League Clubs To Limit Training To Three Weeks

Training in the South next spring by the New York club of the American League and Brooklyn, champions of the National League, will be limited to three weeks, it has been announced. Usually the teams have spent five weeks or more in the South.

Selection of the training camps for both clubs has been left to Bob Connery, the Yankee scout. Tentative plans call for the two teams to train in the same city or in cities close enough for the two teams to be permitted to play exhibition games.

Sailing Of New Orleans Will Prevent Entertainment By Shanghai Football Men

The American football players of the Shanghai team which defeated the U. S. S. New Orleans at the Race Course last Saturday in the game played for the benefit of the Women's Famine Relief Society, planned a dinner for tonight at the Cafe Parisien, with the sailor players as guests but it has been called off as the New Orleans is scheduled to leave port today.

Manager Johnny Knowlan had arrangements all made for chow and a program of speeches and it was planned to start a movement at the dinner for the formation of English rugby teams by both Shanghai and the Navy.

'BABE' HARRIS, WHO STARRED IN OPEN AQUATIC MEET HERE, DEFEATS DUKE KAHANAMOKU

Winner Of Several Events Held In Connection With 1916 Far East Olympic Games At Shanghai, Now At Honolulu

William W. "Babe" Harris, star of the open swimming championship held in connection with the Far Eastern Olympic Games at Shanghai in 1916, defeated Duke Kahanamoku, world's champion, in a special 100-yards race held at Honolulu on December 20, according to cables received in Manila.

Harris holds nearly every Far Eastern record, made records in all tanks in Manila and Singapore and was a member of the United States Olympic swimming team which competed at Antwerp.

He got third in the hundred, and fourth in the 400 meter swim at the Olympic games.

When "Babe" arrived in San Francisco on his return from Antwerp his throat was so swollen that it was necessary to remove his tonsils. It is very possible, that he would have made a better showing, had it not been for this handicap.

Harris went to the United States with the Hawaiian team from Neptune beach.

In the try outs in the states he twice defeated the Duke in the 200 meter swim.

After living in Honolulu for several years Harris went to Manila with his family about six years ago where he was the big man in Columbia Club athletics.

Latest Works Of Fiction

Jan. By M. Morgan Gibbon. New York: Doubleday, Page and Co.

Unusual "girls are the fashion in fiction just now—especially in English fiction, and this is an English book. So we have in Jan the kind of girl who is pretty certain to do just the thing you don't expect, even when you have become well enough acquainted with her to know that she is a creature of erratic moods and unconventional ideas. Through them all Jan is a very real girl, whose spiritual aims are high, and who has a knack of making herself liked by the reader, as well as by her personal friends and acquaintances. This is much to her credit, for some of the "unusual" maidens exploited by authors of the day are of such a type that one is glad they are unusual. As for the novel, as a novel, why, when it begins, as it does, with such a startling sentence as "Jan Owen died in giving birth to her first child," one feels as if anything may happen, and that the author will never hesitate to call a spade a spade no matter what may be the incident under consideration. Not that there is anything coarse in the telling anywhere. It is a thoroughly wholesome story, set forth by a writer who has the gift of frank, effective, convincing narrative.

The Jan who dies in the opening sentence is mother of Jan, the heroine of the book. The younger Jan, being motherless from birth, is brought up rather haphazard by her father, John Owen, for the first few years of her existence. This John Owen is a Socialist, of careless habit, who drinks too much occasionally, and is not so highly regarded in the community as is his smug, well-to-do brother Henry, but who is the possessor of many sterling qualities nevertheless. How Jan's stormy life leads to a safe haven at last, and what Henry's son John—who has as willful a disposition as Jan's own—has to do with it, is logically and interestingly worked out. The value of this novel, which most readers will appreciate, lies in the fact that it is entertaining in itself, page after page, and does not depend, as so many stories do, on a smashing revelatory situation at the end.

Night And Day. By Virginia Woolf. New York: George H. Doran Company.

This is essentially an analytical novel; seekers for thrills and exciting adventures will search its 308 pages in vain. The setting is in London, most of the action taking place in the luxurious home of the Hilberrys. Mrs. Hilberry was the only child of Richard Alardyce, deceased, a poet eminent among the poets of England. "In times gone by Mrs. Hilberry had known all the poets, all the beautiful women and distinguished men of the time. They being now either dead or secluded in their infirm glory, she had made her home a meeting-place for her own relatives, to whom she would lament the passing of the great days of the nineteenth century, where every department of letters and art was represented by two or three illustrious names." In short, the Hilberrys were trying to live up to their ancestors; furthermore, she was engaged upon a life of a poet. This literary effort had its inception years before the story opens, but for reasons which the author fully develops as she humorously portrays Mrs. Hilberry's peculiarities, the work has made no progress at the end. The love affairs of five young people furnish the chief theme of the book; and it cannot be denied that, with one exception, they are a pretty poor lot. The exception is Mary Datchet, a daughter of a country parson. "She was 25, but looked older because she earned, or intended to earn, her living, and had already lost the look of the irresponsible spectator, and had taken on that of a private in the army of workers."

To this resolute girl the others come to pour out their woes; oblivious of the fact that she, too, may be capable of loving, she is sacrificed between the millstones of their egoism and selfishness. In her case virtue does not have its own reward. Decidedly, Mary Datchet gets the worst of it in her association with Katharine Hilberry, the latter's cousin Cassandra, Ralph Denham, the young lawyer who spoils every situation with his conceit, and William Rodney, an embryonic poet.

The portrait of Mr. Hilberry, Katharine's father, is clever; his habit of shunning every responsibility and taking himself off when domestic or social affairs become complicated will be appreciated. All of the characters are drawn with art; their thoughts and actions are minutely observed and dissected. In point of literary style the book is distinctive.

Palmetto. By Stella G. S. Porry. New York: Frederick A. Stokes Company.

Novels of love and adventure so rarely rise to the level of creditable writing that blessings should be generously bestowed on any author who can capture enough of the elusive quality of true romance to make the reader of his book want to settle down into a comfortable chair in some place where interruptions are unlikely. By this same token, the reviewer's figurative hat is doffed to Stella G. S. Perry, author of "Palmetto," a first novel which has as many virtues as it has faults.

The greatest defect in this romance of the bayou region of Louisiana is that it is somewhat overlong—400 pages of fine print. The chapters are thickly strewn with minute descriptions, which, while often good, are scarcely relevant enough to justify their regarding effect upon the story's action. Individual sentences and paragraphs are frequently overgrown with too rank a growth of adjectives.

Mrs. Perry has crowded her canvas with more characters than necessary, and one or two of these figures occasionally rant melodramatically. Timmy, the hunchback, with eyes like a prophet's in his drawn face and a loyalty as true as the stars in their courses, is sympathetically drawn. So is Bri-Bri, of the great heart, who calls himself the only real Irishman on the South Coast; so are the proud Cantrelles, descendants of those French grandees who first came to the forests of Louisiana seeking gold and finding death. Hartley Crandall, a man of the type that women spoil, is a particularly lifelike portrait. But Duvergue, the lost poet, half mad with drink, who Palmetto instinctively knows is not her father, as he claims to be, is overdrawn.

In this type of romance a lovable heroine is as important to the book's appeal as a comely chorus is to the success of a musical comedy. And Palmetto herself is bewitching, as vital as a flame, as full of wild grace as if she walked to music, and with "something about her that made your soul take off its hat."

Mrs. Perry more than balances the defects in her story by the success with which she distills in point the fragrance that is Louisiana. Her pages are redolent of the authentic spirit of the South Coast, her pictures of N' Orleans, the "City of Iron Lace," particularly colorful. Her descriptions are not quite so happy when she shifts the scene of her story to New York; she evidently knows her South better than she does this metropolis.

Palmetto's search to discover the identity of her real parents furnishes her creater with a slender thread of mystery to wind through her pages. The reader is not surprised that in a novel frankly sub-titled "The Romance of a Louisiana Girl" this thread in the end leads the heroine to the land of Heart's Desire.

The Luck Of The Mounted. By Ralph S. Kondall. New York: John Lane Company.

The scene of this story is the great Canadian Northwest, the principal part of it being laid in the vicinity of Calgary, where the author was for a time stationed as a member of the Royal Northwest Mounted Police. A particularly baffling murder case is the theme of the tale and the culprit is a man with a strange and adventurous past. A second killing, with a curious chain of circumstances connecting it with the first one, is, in the end, solved and the murderer brought to justice. Sergeant Burke Slavin, Senior Constable Yorke, nicknamed "Yorkey," and George Redmond, Junior Constable, are the outstanding characters; upon these three fearless young men falls the detective work, which proves to be no easy undertaking. As Slavin remarks on one occasion: "Time an' ag'in—have we shtruck a lead on this blasted case—on'y tu find ut peter out ag'in—Oh! how long, O Lord? How long?"

The story is devoid of romance, but it is told in such a gripping, straightforward manner as to give it the earmarks of truth. Lovers of red-blooded adventure tales will find this well-written story worth while.

WHOLESALE ARSON ASCRIBED TO REDS

niontown, Pa., Authorities Believe Bolsheviki Are Conducting Campaign Of Terror

ROPERTY LOSS $4,000,000

aid On Russian Radicals Gives Clue—Thirty Buildings Destroyed

Uniontown, Pa., Dec. 8.—"Red" adicals, agents of the Russian oviet Government known to have een working among the foreign-orn population in this section, articularly those who labor in the ines, are responsible for the holesale burning of school-ouses, churches, stores, residences nd mines during the last six weeks, ccording to county officers who ave been investigating the fires uring the last ten days.

It was learned today that literature confiscated in a raid on Russian Reds" at Brownsville several days go gave the county authorities heir first information as to the dentity of those responsible for he incendiary fires which have estroyed approximately $4,000,000 worth of property in the northern art of Fayette County.

That the incendiaries planned to trike terror into the hearts of the 0,000 foreigners in the district and orce Bolshevism on them by ruthessly destroying unprotected school uildings and other property is the elief of the authorities after carefully perusing the literature.

Nine school houses, housing between 1,500 and 2,000 pupils; several arge stores and residences and two mall churches—thirty buildings in ll—have been destroyed by fire. ive large mines, two of them alued at $1,500,000 each, are now eething furnaces, due to fires the rigin of which has completely uzzled mining engineers and geolosts. Old miners and mine bosses eclare the fires were of incendiary rigin, in each instance the fire was iscoverred in a coal seam where here was absolutely no likelihood f fire reaching unless caused by ome human agency.

Following the breaking out of res, on several occasions uncouth, ough looking foreigners have been een in the neighborhoods.

It is no secret that the industrial istricts of Fayette and Westmoreand and sections of Washington ounties contain thousands of adical thinkers and these have ublicly declared that education in he public schools is a most effective ntidote for Bolshevism.

Revenge, hatred of Government, efiance of compulsory school atendance, antagonism to vaccinaion, pro-Germanism and other auses have been ascribed by the olice authorities as causes for the holesale incendiarism, but the ounty authorities admit that they ave leads "which tend to show hat an organised Red campaign of rson to intimidate the foreign-orn population of the district is nder way."

Two pyromania experts have been ent into the field by the National nderwriter's Association, with eadquarters in New York City, to o-operate with the State troopers. hey will devote their efforts to a tudy of the methods used by the rebugs, and, if possible, determine he motive and whether or not the ncendiarism is the work of an inividual or a group.

Rewards totaling $6,000 are now ffered for information leading to he arrest and conviction of the uilty parties, Fayette County Comissioners having offered $5,000 esterday and the School Board of erry Township, in which was ocated the Star Junction school deroyed Sunday morning with loss f $100,000, having today added 1,000. It was said today that ore than 200 men, including conables and police, have joined the hirty State police, under Captain erbert Smith, in a systematic ombing of the district.

Booklet On Typhus For Famine Relief Workers Is Issued

A booklet on the subject of typhus or famine fever which has been specially written for the use of famine relief workers has been issued by the Council on Health Education in response to a request that was made by the Red Cross and other organisations engaged in relief work when typhus appeared on the heels of the famine in China's northern provinces.

The booklet is the work of Howard G. Barrie M.D., F.R.C.S. and W. W. Peter M. D., C. P. H. and it tells how the disease is acquired and outlines methods of fighting it.

The opening chapter is devoted to the subject "Personal Safeguards Against Typhus" and tells in detail methods of prevention. The second part of the booklet, by Doctor Peter, is a comprehensive description of the course of the disease based largely on the author's observations in a previous epidemic.

British Magnetos In First Place, Report

(Reuter's Service)

London, Jan. 11.—The fact that British magnetos are unrivalled in the world is shown in the Air Ministry's report on competitions held in September with a view to ascertaining the most efficient and most reliable types of airplanes.

The Ministry pays tribute to the number of exhibits with high engine power in proportion to the weight of the machine, thus providing a useful reserve of power.

An important advance is also shown in the types permitting of rising and landing in a confined space, the best specimens of which, the so-called "Amphibians," are capable of alighting on and rising from land or water, and have high commercial potentialities.

Although the rules did not bar foreign manufactured secondary equipment, such, items were insignificant among the exhibits, while all the magnetos were British.

(Note: There's something the matter with the above item. How could the decision be reached that British magnetos are unrivalled, when, as the item points out, only British magnetos were tested?)

Monkey Gland Cure For Defective Child

Hope To Save Girl Of 19 Who Has Spent All Her Life In Dark Cellar

Chicago, Dec. 8.—Mary Zembok, 19, of Joliet, Ill., may become a girl of 19—that is, if the grafting of a monkey gland into her neck today restores her mentality and physical development to a normal state. Physicians who performed the operation at the American Hospital said that it had been successful.

Mary has been mentally defective almost since birth, and completely paralysed. The mother, a Pole, has five children besides Mary, all of them normal. When Mary was 2 years old it became apparent that she would not develop into a normal child, and Mrs. Zembok relegated her to the basement of their home, where she lived in perpetual darkness until two months ago, when the health authorities learned of the case.

The child, when found, was immediately removed to a hospital here. It was decided that the only hope for full recovery would be the gland transplanting operation. Today the monkey, a full-grown animal, and the child were taken to the operating room, the thyroid gland removed from the animal and transplanted into the neck of the child.

TERRORISM USED TO DISORGANISE KAPPELL ARMY

Chita's Call For Officers And Young Soldiers Will Be Ignored

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Vladivostok, Jan. 11.—Chita has issued an order mobilising the officers and younger soldiers who served under Semenoff and with the Kappelites, and ordering them to report at Far Eastern Headquarters at Chita.

The Kappelites and Semenoffites do no not intend to obey as they consider this a ruse on the part of Krasnoschekoff to disband them and place their officers in concentration camps for purposes of revenge.

At several places in Primoria organised bands, in some cases assisted by militiamen, are attacking individual Kappellite officers and soldiers and maltreating them. There is no doubt that terrorist methods are being adopted for the purpose of disbanding the Kappellites.

Peking, Jan. 12.—It is stated here officially that the Chinese have cut off the supplies and communications of the invaders on the frontier, north-east of Ugra, and the latter's position is most precarious.

The Government has received a communication indirectly from Chita, offering to co-operate against the invaders, but has declined the offer, on the ground that it is able to cope with affairs within its own borders.

(Staff Wire To THE CHINA PRESS)

Peking, Jan. 12.—A Harbin despatch states that General Krasonochekoff, the Chita dictator, is seriously ill and General Kozjewnikoff is succeeding him as the head of the Government there. The financial situation is extremely desperate and the officials are facing starvation on account of the scanty wages received from the Communists, although the minority is still manipulating elections by means of their army.

There is no service given by the trains running between Chita and Irkutsk, while the line between Manchuli and Chita is still closed by the Chinese authorities. Trading on a small scale is carried on through Chinese official departments.

The Chinese are allowed to trade with Blagoveschensk where Russians are utilising the gold cres taken from the mines as currency. This kind of trade however is not prosperous.

Moral Welfare Body Needs Financial Aid

The Shanghai Moral Welfare Committee is making an appeal for further funds with which to carry on its educational work, increased need for which is emphasised following the recent visit and report of the Eastern Commission for the prevention of venereal diseases.

The Committee originally asked for the sum of $5,000, with which it was proposed to prepare and publish in Chinese, Japanese and English 85,000 bulletins and an equal number of pamphlets. The Committee has received $1,200 and, in addition to paying current expenses, has managed to publish 69,000 bulletins and pamphlets in Chinese and Foreign, not having published anything in Japanese as yet.

The Committee has recently asked the members of the Shanghai Missionary Association to repeat the help given financially two years ago.

Union Church Guild Folk Song Program Enchants Audience

Members of the Union Church Literary and Social Guild enjoyed an unusually pleasing program last evening when a number of local musicians rendered a symposium of the folk songs of various countries.

By way of introduction to the numbers the Rev. A. H. Rowland said the program promised to be a real contribution to the League of Nations. Politicians could do little unless the peoples understood one another, and the best way to sympathy was through song. The soul of a people, he said, was enshrined in its folk songs and this evening the audience could feel the unity of Christendom.

Two sets of numbers, songs of France and of Germany had to be omitted owing to the inability to be present of Mr. A. G. Loehr. The first two selections, from the folk songs of Italy, were sung by Mr. Brunelli. "O Sole Mio" and "A Surrentina." Songs of England, Scotland and Ireland were finely sung by Mrs. N. Mathieson, the numbers including "O Willow, Willow," "Glenlogie," "Laird o'Cockpen," "My Love's An Arbutus" and "I Know Where I'm Going."

A particularly pleasing item was the contribution from Wales, made up of three songs by Mrs. Dixon who accompanied her singing with a harp, adding a quaint touch to the beauty and pathos of the pieces.

Songs of Denmark and Sweden were given by Mrs. S. A. Magnussen and Mr. Brunelli sang two Russian numbers.

All of the artists performed admirably and the audience was enthusiastic in its applause.

Constabulary Trial At Manila Delayed

Manila, Dec. 29.—Upon the request of the attorneys of the defense, the arraignment of the 77 constabulary soldiers confined in Bilibid prison in connection with the tragic incident which took place in Intramuros December 15, was postponed indefinitely by order of Judge Carlos Imperial yesterday. The arraignment was to have been yesterday.

Until General Rafael Crame, chief of the constabulary, is discharged from the Philippine General hospital the administrative investigation to be conducted by the secretary of the department of justice into the organisation and connection of the constabulary headquarters with the Intramuros tragedy will be indefinitely postponed.

General Crame, who was to have testified yesterday afternoon, is a patient at the Philippine General hospital, to which institution he was taken shortly after 1 o'clock yesterday afternoon in a state of nervous exhaustion. At a late hour last night his temperature was reported to be high and his physicians have ordered him to remain quietly in bed.

General Crame's illness resulted, the doctors say, from the excitement and unremitting labor in connection with the constabulary soldiers' riot of two weeks ago.

German Dye Firms Prepare To Sweep World

Berlin, Dec. 6.—All big concerns in Germany are going to fortify themselves with large amounts of new capital so as to face the fight for the world's markets.

The most conspicuous feature of the German money market of late has been the fact that of the three chief dyemaking firms, Messrs. Friedrich Bayer, Badische Anilin und Soda Fabrik, and the Meister Lucius concern is each calling for 90,000,000 marks of fresh capital. The Anilin Fabrikation Company, another member of the trust which lately announced a dividend of 18 percent, is calling for an additional 30,000,000 marks. There is, I am told, a rush for these shares, as the public has confidence in the ability of the dye companies, and the latter are equally sure of their future.

A member of the Board of Directors of a well known company, which during the last year multiplied its previous year's profits by six-fold, told me the other day that the dye trust was so certain of the superiority of its productions that it has no reason to suppose any restrictions will bar its activities in the world's best markets. Dye trust agents who have been in England, he said, returned greatly encouraged, and from most other countries reports are altogether satisfactory.

Another big concern, that of Messrs. Franz Rasquin & Co. of Muelheim announced net profits just over three million marks, as against 60,000 marks last year, and it increased its dividends from 30 to 40 percent. The firm's report states that it "has large orders in hand at good prices."

In order to speed up the dye business the trust is unloading its interests in the Merzburg and Opau Chemical Manure Works onto a new company with 500,000,000 marks' capital, and the trust arrangement, made in August, 1916, to expire in December, 1965, has been extended so as to remain in force. The capital of the trust, formed of seven companies, will be 962,800,000 marks. Four of the chief firms of the trust employ nearly 1,000 research experts.

Regarding foreign trade, the trust is pressing its export department to obtain relief from export restrictions and the Government is doing all it can in its own way. I learn that reports, even from such places as Venezuela and China, are very satisfactory. In Venezuela German dyes are pushing out American products, while China took, in the three months of April, May and June, half the amount of the aniline dyes that England imported in six months. Holland is another market in which German dye firms are doing exceedingly well. During the first half of the present year Holland imported from Germany nearly 18,500,000 florins worth of all kinds of dyestuffs, which at the present rate of exchange means about 380,000,000 marks. Of that amount aniline and tar dyes accounted for 4,500,000 florins, against 180,000 florins for the first half of last year.

It is a curious fact that some German dye firms are running on coal from the United States. German dye firm agents who have been to the United States report an extremely cool reception, and it is recognised that there will still be a fight for the trade there.

KINGMAN & BROS.
How to Preserve the Teeth

In order to keep the teeth in a good condition scientific precaution must be taken. Through negligence, decay and numerous other affections such as teeth-ache, dental periostitis esteo-periostitis, necrosis of the jaw, etc., may arise. During the process of ingestion, there are settled on the teeth, some deposits of mineral and organic matters, called tartar, which possesses a morbid power of pressing the gum. As an inevitable result of the presence of this tartar, the teeth will become elongated and movable and will, by degrees, absorb away the enamel, leading ultimately to the decay and degeneration of the teeth. The tartar is so hard and resistant to the process of brushing that it cannot be scraped off except with dental instruments specially devised for that purpose.

Dr. KINGMAN offers to the public his service for preserving their teeth at an annual subscription Fee of $10.00 per Head to be paid in advance.

The work to be done by Dr. KINGMAN to the subscribers consists in:—

(1) Cleaning of the teeth quarterly
(2) Filling with gold platinum alloy only, when the teeth present holes.
(3) Inspecting the teeth at any time at the desire of the subscribers.

MONARCHISTS LOSE TEST FIGHT TO GET KAISER'S WEALTH

Vote In The Prussian Assembly Shows Their Strength And That Of Republicans

JUNKER INTRIGUE WATCHED

Attempt To Extend The Orgesch To Berlin Checked, But Spreads Elsewhere

Berlin, Dec. 2.—Yesterday's tumultuous scenes in the Prussian National Convention caused by the fight for the Hohenzollern fortune ended, as Vorwarts says, "with another defeat for the former dynasty." It was really a trial of strength between the republicans and the monarchists and the latter lost the battle because, though the House refused to pass the Socialist motion simply confiscating the whole Hohenzollern fortune and merely paying the members of the family adequate pensions, another motion requesting the Government to withdraw the present bill and substitute a new one with regard to the origin of the so-called Hohenzollern fortune, as revealed yesterday by the Socialist member Heilmann, was referred to the Judicial Committee.

One of the foremost Socialist leaders told The New York Times correspondent his party never meant the first motion seriously, as it was merely a tactical means to secure Independent Socialist and Communist support for the defeat of the bill before the House. The Socialists, he said, were quite willing to give Wilhelm what really belonged to him, but refused to endow the Hohenzollern family with over 50,000,000 marks annually from the impoverished people, which sum would probably largely be used to prepare the return of one pretender or another to the throne.

Strong pressure will be brought to remove the Prussian Minister of Justice Amzehnthof, who is principally responsible for the present bill, and replace him by a Republican who will not compensate the Hohenzollerns for the property which they never rightly owned but obtained by fraudulent practices from the State.

"At yesterday's session," continued my informant, "the republicans and monarchists showed themselves in their true colors. We now know the members of the Centrist and Democratic parties whose hope or fear that Hohenzollerns might return is stronger than their love for the republic."

Perhaps it is not so much hope as fear that actuated some Centrists and Democrats in voting in favor of the Hohenzollerns. Even loyal Nationalists emphasised at yesterday's session that none of them dreamed of ever recalling Wilhelm and they certainly mean it for the present anyway, but there is always the danger of a monarchist uprising by hot-headed and ill-advised individuals who would drag the more sober minded reactionaries with them into the whirlpool of a bloody civil war.

Despite their pretended indignation at yesterday's session the Prussian Junkers are undergoing a decided change in their attitude toward the Hohenzollerns because they feel deeply the shame of Wilhelm's desertion to Holland. The notorious von Oldenburg Januschau, speaking at a meeting of agrarians yesterday, stated explicity that the agrarians were as much opposed to a Monarchist as to a Communist revolution. At the same time he declared Parliamentarism was impotent to save Germany from her present calamity and that a dictator was needed. Januschau pointed with pride to the organisation of Escherich, called the Orgesch, which he said had 200,000 members and laughed at the Entente. Like many other reactionaries. Januschau doubtless regards Master Forester Doctor Escherich as Germany's coming savior.

Escherich, too, like the Bavarian Prime Minister von Kahr and many other reactionary politicians, constantly emphasises that he is equally opposed to a monarchist as to a communitst putsch, but his republican opponents never cease to point out that even if it be true that they do not wish to provoke a monarchist putsch they are certainly preparing the way for something like it.

It must be admitted that the Prussian and Federal authorities, perhaps under Socialist pressure, have a watchful eye on all monarchist intrigues and only yesterday they discovered that despite a special prohibition, an officer named Hubert Bostelmann had formed "a regiment for home defense" which seems to have been the first attempt to establish the Orgesch in Berlin. Different companies of this regiment would meet and drill in the guise of singing societies, literary societies and dancing schools. Arms, however, were not discovered. Letters found at the headquarters proved beyond a doubt Escherich's connection with Bostelmann, but the latter disappeared before he could be arrested.

In Wurttemberg the notorious General Von Watter acted as Escherich's agent until threatened with arrest. Escherich has recently established his organisation in Meklenburg and Hesse-Nassau and his agents everywhere are the blackest reactionaries.

What puzzles the people is whether Escherich wishes to play the part of the Hungarian dictator Horthy in Germany or whether he is playing the Wittelsbach game. He would hardly take so much trouble for the Hohenzollerns.

Austria In Liquidation

ONLY a few months ago a special commission of investigation appointed by the Allies warned them unless something was done to save Austria, that stricken and much-reduced country would be forced into liquidation. Following this report, an effort was made in the direction recommended, but it is now evident, if the Berlin correspondent of The London Times is correctly informed, that the effort was not powerful enough. This correspondent wires his paper that the Austrian cabinet has decided to resign and has asked the Reparations Commission to take charge of Austria's affairs.

The only interpretation to be put upon this news is that the Cabinet of Austria has found that the country cannot function as a going concern under present conditions. It cannot of its own motion save itself. Therefore it voluntarily places itself in the hands of its former enemies. If they can resuscitate it and place it upon its feet again all right. If not—?

Here several questions arise. What will the people of Austria do to help the Allies? Will they do anything? And again, What can the Allies do? How can they, for instance, put Austrian money back on its feet in the markets of the world? Most of them even as victors find their own money inconceivably depreciated abroad. And the principle task that faces them is that of restoring their own money to somewhere near par. This also is the first task they face in undertaking the Austrian restoration. One despatch relates, pathetically enough, that no matter how hard the Austrians work, no matter how much of their own money they earn, they do not receive enough, for it does not buy them even the food their bodies require.

Another question posed for the Allies by this unparalleled situation is this: Supposing that they assume responsibility for Austria, or undertake to finance that country to an extent deemed adequate to restore it to self-respecting solvency—what will other countries that are nearly as badly off do? For instance, the reckoning with Russia is still to come. And what would Germany do?

If the Allies set out to save Austria, Germany who has protested against the terms of the peace from the very day she signed the treaty, would be given one more lever with which to lift the load from her shoulders.

It is evident that the Allies are here faced by a difficult and new situation full of pitfalls.

THE UNKNOWN WARRIOR

An article in yesterday's CHINA PRESS told of questions that had been asked in the English Parliament as to who was the first to suggest paying tribute to the "Unknown Warrior." Although Lloyd George gave no definite answer it is fairly well known that Mr. J. B. Wilson, News Editor of a London daily, was the man.

The article in question calls to mind some beautiful words written by Reginald Bacchus and called:

THE UNKNOWN SAILOR

He needs no Abbey stone to lie
Above his coffined shroud;
The sea his casket, and the waves
His memory cry aloud.
The engine-throbs and syrens speak
Each hour his epitaph;
The beacons round our island home
Each one his cenotaph.

I TOLD YOU SO

D'Annunzio is going to make his home in Venice and return to his literary activities. "I am quite convinced that I had something to do with this decision of versatile poet. But a few weeks ago I finished up one of the Rhymes of the Times, (I had to finish somehow) like this:

"He might do worse than stick to verse,

AND THEN I'LL LIVE IN FRENCHTOWN

I suppose that everyone who has a vote in Frenchtown has been frightfully excited lately over the elections. I don't wonder at it. Do you see what those advertised six are out for:

Water,
Electricity,
Trams,
And all GOOD.

Good luck to them. May they get 'em. Fancy having nice clean water without any mud in it. Fancy having the water on most of the day. Fancy never having it cut off. Of course we in the Model Settlement haven't sufficient imagination to fancy any such thing. But above all fancy having good electricity. Not naughty electricity, that turns nasty just as the cook is serving up the soup. Trams! Good trams. Not overcrowded trams with lots of damns from all parts of them. Good trams with lots of season ticket holders, who show their little bit of pasteboard with pleasure. It's a great program. Frenchtown will be Utopia.

HIS SHORT WAY WITH SERMONS

"The singer—Brignoli—took a decidedly masterful view of his own share in public worship. The sermon, on one occasion, being long, and Brignoli perturbed lest he should be late at a luncheon party, the celebrated tenor, after nervously walking up and down the choir loft for some time, suddenly tore aside the curtain and called down to the priest, 'Stop-a de preach! Stop-a de preach! I sing-a now!' And the mandate of the eccentric singer was duly obeyed and the song sung."—A Quaker Singer's Recollections, by David Bispham.

Gentle Advice To "My Dear Wells"

By Henry Arthur Jones

THIRD LETTER.

My Dear Wells:

There is so great an amount of loose and confused thinking in the world—in addition to your own—that it seems advisable to make an organised effort to deal with it. I am sure you will claim that this effort, like every other human activity, should be an international one. After much prolonged and earnest consideration I am convinced that this important matter should be placed under the jurisdiction of the League of Nations. This, I allow, is a startling proposal. I further allow that it is an utterly impracticable one. But surely that is no reason why it should not form part of League's general scheme of operations and afford its members another attractive subject for debate.

Without searching for the permanent and underlying causes of war, it must be granted that the late disastrous world conflict was immediately caused by the failure of a certain number of European politicians to think clearly, honestly and righteously upon the questions that you and I are now discussing—with less alacrity of cheerful response on your part than I could wish you to show.

Those who have accurate and retentive memories will be able to recall that the League of Nations was invented for the purpose of doing away with war. Its motto, I am told, is to be emblazoned on a shield of gold (an involuntary gift from the opulent taxpayers of Europe) and is to be inscribed over the portico of its hotel in Geneva. That motto runs as follows: "Let every nation be invited to meddle in the affairs of every other nation." Putting aside the question whether this is the best method of securing that international goodwill and amity which we all desire, it is manifest that careless and disordered thinking is an accessory cause of war. Now, if the League of Nations is benevolently engaged in stopping war, it may be quite as benevolently engaged in stopping the careless and disordered thinking that leads to war—or at least in debating about the matter. The League has got this large hotel in Geneva, and its members must debate about something. As a taxpayer, I contribute to the enormous expenses of the League. I hope therefore, that I am entitled to suggest a subject for its discussion.

Further, my dear Wells, in proposing to place all the careless and disordered thinking in the world under the jurisdiction of the League of Nations, I am paying a very pretty compliment to yourself. For this same League of Nations was one of the many things that you so lavishly prophesied about during the war. It is true that before it was constituted, the League tended to cloud that good understanding between America and Britain upon which the peace of the whole world depends. It is also true that one of its first effects, after it was constituted, was to cloud that good understanding between Britain and France which is almost, if not quite, as necessary for the preservation of the world's peace. But if I know anything of the constitution of your mind, if I rightly estimate your loyal, unflinching adherence to your theories, even when they are working disastrously for mankind, your faith in the League of Nations remains unshaken.

For these reasons, then, I propose that the League of Nations shall be appointed to control—or at least to discuss—the vast amount of loose, disordered thinking that goes on in the world.

I suppose that the League will proceed in this matter by its favorite system of mandates. I have, therefore, applied to the Council of the League of Nations for a mandate to superintend your social and political philosophy. I hope you will take this as evidence of my continued interest in your attempts to impose your international theories upon the kindly simplicity of those whom you are "thinking for."

It would be a graceful acknowledgment of the services I am rendering you, and it would also be a flattering courtesy to the League itself, if you would also apply to the Council for a mandate to look after my thinking on these questions. For, if I am holding wrong opinions about momentous matters upon which the peace and security of the whole world depend you could not do me, or the public, a greater service than to expose my fallacies with the same vigilance and pertinacity that I am trying to expose yours. Unlike yourself, the moment I find I am holding a wrong opinion I turn the veriest coward and renegade. I do not stand by it and seek to justify it. I abjure it and take to my heels.

It may be that the Council of the League of Nations will refuse to issue a mandate to me to look after your thinking. I do not think this is likely. Mandates have not been going off very well lately, and I take it that the League will be only too glad to issue at least one mandate that will be scrupulously, industriously and rigorously obeyed. If, however, the Council refuse to grant me a mandate in watch over your lucubrations, I shall follow the course that is usually adopted with regard to the League's decisions. I shall take no notice of them. I shall issue a mandate to myself.

In pursuance of this resolve I proceed to my promised examination of your third paper on "Russia in Shadow" (The New York Times, Nov. 14, 1920).

In reading it through, I was so much struck by two separate passages in it that I think them worthy to be detached from the body of the paper and set forth in juxtaposition. In the beginning of the article you say, "Today the Bolshevist Government sits, I believe, in Moscow, as securely established as any Government in Europe." That sentence tacitly affirms the enduring stability of Bolshevist rule. Later in the article you say, "If we help Baron Wrangel to pull down the by no means firmly established Government in Moscow—" That sentence tacity affirms the precarious instability of Bolshevist rule.

Of course, you may juggle with both sentences until you prove that you didn't mean to convey either one impression or the other. In the first sentence, it suited your general purpose to frighten us away from questioning the authority and permanence of Bolshevist rule. In the second sentence, it suited your general purpose to frighten us into acknowledging Bolshevist rule because to some extent it backs up your Internationalist theories. You may plead that your inconsistencies are not likely to be noticed by your disciples, who for the most part allow you to do their thinking for them. It is quite likely that you do not notice these inconsistencies yourself. But if you will not think me annoyingly inquisitive, may I press you to tell us which of these two contradictory opinions about Bolshevist rule you do really hold?

I may remind you that you took what has been called with elastic accuracy a week-end trip to Russia, in order that you might learn all about the conditions of the country, and the aims and prospects of its present rulers. Very plainly the destiny of millions in Europe depends upon whether or not Bolshevist government is securely established in Moscow. You are at liberty not to have an opinion upon this question of sovereign importance to all the world. You can frankly say, "I don't know." But, kindly disposed as I am to allow you the widest and wildest latitude of unsupported and unverified assertion, indulgent as I am to human frailties, I really cannot permit you to hold two contradictory opinions upon the same matter of fact. That is asking too much of my good nature. Please tell us which opinion you do really hold. The least respect you can show to those whose thinking you are doing for them is to be coherently wrong.

Having given this striking and characteristic example of the measure of your ability to think for other people, and of the value of your pronouncements, I might well be absolved from any further analysis either of the statements you make about Russian conditions, or of the conclusions you draw from them. In this third paper there is again a wealth of confused and contradictory utterance and inference. A less gentle mannered man than myself would be tempted to a severe exposure and reproof of it. But I wish to let you off easily, in the hope that my moderation will incline you to a judicious suppression of your more glaring delinquencies and illegicalities.

I must, however, glance at one or two for the many loose and provocative passages which I had marked or dissection and refutation. In sketching the condition of Russia in the closing months of 1917 you remark: "Through this fevered and confused country went representatives of Britain and France, blind to the quality of immense and tragic disaster about them, intent only upon the war."

I think it impossible that any representative of Britain or France at that terrible time could be blind to "the quality of immense and tragic disaster about them," not only in Russia, but thoroughout Europe. If they were blind how can you possibly know it? Have you questioned them about their impressions of the Russian situation at that time? What is your authority for that statement? What prompts you to make it, except your ineradicable antipathy to your own country and to France? It is probable in the highest degree that in the midst of the threatening and increasing anxieties of the whole European situation in those months the representatives of Britain and France in Russia, instead of being blind, saw every clearly that the only way of avoiding a far more immense and tragic disaster for Russia was to be "intent on the war." In that case their eyes and their intelligence were far more wide awake than yours.

For again, I must remind you, and I do here stamp and engrave it upon your memory, and upon the memory of every one who reads these letters, so that they may have a perpetual test of the value of your judgment in all these supreme matters—I do here insistently remind you, my dear Wells, that in those closing months of 1917 you were calling upon England, in the columns of our leading journals, to sacrifice and abandon everything that she had taken up arms to guard, and to make an infamous, ignoble, defeatist peace with Germany. I brought you to account then, as I am bringing you to account now, and as I shall continue to bring you to account, while you continue to backbite your country, and to fondle and intrigue with those who are seeking to drag it into revolution and anarchy.

In those late months of 1917 you were perniciously intent upon stopping the war. Naturally, you have a had word for the British and French representatives who were intent upon urging Russia to carry it on. Had Russia been able to follow their counsels, she would probably have been spared the worst of her present miseries.

Let us touch upon another point. You speak with admiration of the genius of the ex-Pacifist Trosky. Ex-pacifist! Yes, my dear Wells, if you will but follow the laws of action and reaction, you will find that pacifism and the proclamation of International Brotherhood inevitably call forth a response of militarism. You indicate some sympthetic admiration for the spirit and the equipment of the army which the ex-Pacifist Trotsky has raised. They are to be employed, among other things, in undermining the security of the British Empire. Of course you give them a passing nod of recognition.

Zorin, another of the Bolshevist Communist leaders, engages your affection and admiration. He met, you tell us, with brutal incivility when applying for a job as a packer in a big dry goods store in New York. He therefore set himself to wreck what remained of social order in Russia. It seems to be an ill-founded and insufficient motive, something akin to the motive of the boy who stoned a flock of goslings because some days before a gander had pecked his leg. Doubtless you will argue that in the urgent necessity to destroy our present civilisation the sins of the ganders in New York must be visited upon the goslings in Russia.

But Zorin established a still stronger title to your friendship and esteem. You did your best, you say, to find out from Zenovieff and Zorin what they thought they were doing at the Baku conference. You suppose they "had a vague idea of hitting back at the British Government." Naturally, you declare you have a real friendship for Comrade Zorin. Any man who hits at your own Government and your own country is a man whom you take to your heart.

Throughout this third paper you condemn and expose the vicious Marxian principles upon which these men are governing Russia. But you will heartily and freely forgive them for all the consequent misery and starvation and ruin they have brought upon their country in consideration of their lofty determination to spread these same doctrines throughout the British Empire, and bring your own country to the same misery, starvation and ruin. That, I submit to you, my dear Wells, is a fair summary of your general political argument. It unifies the inconsistencies which all these papers of yours contain into the consistency of a sustained effort on your part to vilify your own country and to aid and extol the Russian revolutionists, who avowedly are seeking to break into pieces the British Empire.

Unless you express a wish that I shall examine your third paper in greater detail I shall conclude that you are satisfied with the remarks that I have already made upon it. I must not forget my promise to let you off easily, so far as my stern sense of the duty I owe you will allow me.

In my last letter I made another promise. I rashly said I would try to unravel the tangled relations of Marxian principles with your own political creed. This, I frankly confess, I am unable to do; for I cannot get any clear and consequent knowledge of what your political creed is. I shall have to throw myself upon your indulgence, and ask you to be kind enough to explain exactly what are its guiding principles, and how you propose to apply them in a practical, intelligible way to the present troubles and disorders of the world.

You unreservedly condemn and ridicule the cardinal Marxian doctrines. In this matter I congratulate you upon being in the company of thinkers of a higher cast than your usual associates and disciples. You tell us that although Marxian communism is stupidly, blindly wrong and mischievous, yet you have an admiration and friendship for the men who have imposed it upon the Russian people to the infinite misery and impoverishment of the land. Further, you obviously regard the British Empire as a monstrous imposture, and you see in its prolonged existence the one great obstacle to the realisation of your international theories and designs.

But these are negative doctrines. I suppose you would call yourself a Socialist and a revolutionary. But, my dear Wells, there are so many different sorts of Socialists, and so many different sorts of revolutionaries. Apparently, their only point of agreement is that the present social order must be destroyed, and a new civilisation built upon principles utterly different from those which have hitherto regulated the conduct and actions of mankind.

When I was a boy, there were various religious sects in the provincial town of some twenty thousand inhabitants where I lived. Their spiritual guides and elders disputed interminably about the doctrines of justification, sanctification, predestination, and other vitally essential, but entirely obscure and transcendental, articles of faith. I remember that the Particular Baptists, an extremely small and exclusive sect, prided themselves upon being God's own elect. This enabled them to indulge in constant theological discussion, and occasional moral lapses.

It seems that the varieties and vagaries of theological doctrine, which afforded so much opportunity for earnest debate to our grandfathers, are in this generation replaced by the varieties and vagaries of Socialist doctrine. I was awed and impressed by the mysteries of justification and predestination. I could not understand them, and gave up all attempts to bring them into relation with the realities of the world in which I was living. I am not awed and not impressed by the varied and contradictory doctrines of socialism. But, equally, I cannot bring them into relation with the realities of the world in which I am living. They offer to me no better guidance in the conduct and regulation of the world's practical affairs than my old puzzles "Justification" and predestination."

In consideration of the trouble I am taking to put you right, my dear Wells, I hope you will take the pains to relieve my bewilderment when I try to understand you own political principles and to put them into practical relation with the facts and realties of our disordered world. Give us some intelligible statement of the socialistic creed that will transform human nature, and will therefore be workable in this actual world in which we live.

I am quite sure that in your voluminous writings you have already formulated one, or perhaps fifty, of such paper schemes for the regeneration of mankind by Socialistic International Government. Alas! my dear Wells, you formulated a paper scheme for the international government of mid-Africa. Whatever its merits, it had the rather serious drawback that any attempt to work it would thrown the whole continent into confusion. However, I will not dwell any further upon your indiscretions. You are relying upon my promise to let you off easily.

There are wicked men in the world, my dear Wells, who won't let your theories work. That is the sole bar to your success as a social philosopher. Why not frustrate their malice and get a new set of theories?

Adieu. till our next meeting.

Henry Arthur Jones.

Adult-Minded Children

BY DR. WM. A. McKEEVER
(Professor in the University of Kansas and an Educator of Nation-wide Repute)

Certain children, by an unfortunate circumstance, are thrown exclusively in the company of adults, learn their language, think their thoughts and never enjoy a normal childhood of their own. These "little men and women" are not inherently peculiar in type and temperament, as some believe, but are simply the product of environment.

The adult-minded child is likely to be sober, reflective, watchful and cautious, but lacking somewhat in initiative and the spirit of adventure. The only child in the family and the first born—for a while the only child—these are too often shut out from the company of other children and thus forced prematurely to become mental adults.

Because he uses choice language and utters so many "wise" remarks and gives attention to the sober affairs of every-day life, the adult-minded child is often referred to as an example of brilliancy and a worthy pattern for others. But this favorable judgment of him is probably undeserved. He is suffering an irrecoverable loss.

Nothing of equal value can be substituted for the give-and-take experiences of children mingling one with the others. Here the head, the tongue, the hand and the heart grow up together. The first judgments of the little one should be those of a child dealing with a child and with baby actions following all the while on the heels of immature decision. The untrained tongue must lisp imperfectly and the childish emotion respond impulsively in harmony with the manifold baby events of a normal day.

A rich and slow-enfolding childhood signifies that thousands of fragmentary experiences—with head, hand, heart and tongue participating—go into the subconscious mind as inter-connected memories. These become an abundant source of supply for future thought and action. Children and not adults are by far the most competent teachers of their king.

The lessons which adults lay out for children incline to be too perfect, too abstract and too forward looking, whereas, the valuable stock-in-trade of the growing mind is imperfection of form and figure, with simple outlines to be improved by childish trial and error.

The pictures, the objects made of clay, wood and other materials—these must be crude at first and something to be gradually perfected through practice. Adults are wont to place perfect complex models before the child learned and thus confuse him.

But perhaps the greatest wrong unconsciously dine the adult-minded child is to force his attention constantly upon future situations—about which he can learn to talk parrot-like without understanding them—when it ought to be engaged almost entirely upon the immediate surroundings. The divine right of the child is to deal with the present and not with speculation as to the future.

To be placed daily in the midst of many tasks and things to suit his age and interest; to mingle in crude give-and-take complexus of experience with others of his rank; to use in regular and repeated response to all these, his head to think, his hand to act, his tongue to speak, his heart to feel—this is the glory of childhood. Thus keep your child out of the stale abstract delusion of adult-mindedness.

Simplifying The Home

By LORETTA C. LYNCH
(Acknowledged Authority on All Matters Pertaining to House-hold Management)

In our larger cities, and especially where rents are high, there is a decided movement to have rooms suited to more than one purpose.

The better apartments, consisting of three or four rooms, are in great demand if this arrangement is possible. The living room is so decorated and furnished that it makes a delightful place to dine as well. One apartment which I saw recently consisted of four rooms and was to be used by three people. There was an all-white kitchen with washable walls of creamy yellow. The built-in features—such as cabinet, ice box and wash tubs—were of snowy white washable finish. There was a charming breakfast nook with the necessary built-in features. In this way the kitchen was a three-purpose room. It served as a laundry, a breakfast room as well as a kitchen.

In this particular family two of the three went out to work each day. The housewife was a delicate little woman who had many days when she was physically unable to do much housework. When she realised the rather permanent nature of her physical condition, she did the very sensible thing of giving up her seven-room home and taking this smaller one.

A combination living-dining-room can be made a thing of beauty and real usefulness by careful furnishing, or it may be made to disclose itself as a makeshift. The treatment of the walls should be made the first consideration. The very latest idea in walls is to have them finished in a neutral shade of lusterless, washable paint. A grayish or creamy brown tone makes a suitable background for almost any furniture. The plainness of the wall makes it possible to use either plain or figured hangings.

The little home of which I speak had a most attractive living room. It was a bit out of the ordinary, and any clever woman can adapt the description to her particular need. The walls were finished in a neutral gray. Likewise, the woodwork was finished in a somewhat lighter shade of gray. Set against the walls were candelabra of silver finish, in groups of two. These had silken shades of old rose.

The rug was of Chinese blue in a typical Chinese design. This rug was an American-made rug, and althought it was of the finest of this type, it cost but a fraction of the price of a real Oriental.

Some of the chairs were of the straight-back gray wood variety. There was one fireside type of chair-deep and roomy. It was covered in striped velour in a two-tone old blue. There were two low stools that might have been considered chairs without backs.

And since this room was to be a dininig room as well as a living room, there was a gray gateleg table. When not in use this was placed back against the wall. Several current magazines might be found on it. But at dinner time it was pulled out into the middle of the room and with its leaves lifted it could be made to accommodate as many as six diners.

The dishes were kept in the kitchen cabinet. Table linen was stored in the dresser drawer in the bedroom.

Another feature of this pretty room was its table-bed. This could be unfolded for the guest who stayed over night. These beds that fold into tables are among the newest in furniture. They come in single and double size. For a small consideration extra, the furniture shop agreed to have the bed-table finished in gray.

But you were most sure the room contained a small sideboard. But upon examination you found that the beautiful piece of furniture that was covered by a scarf and held a bowl of luscious fruit was none other than one of the newest table phonographs.

Cigar Nomenclature

(From the Philadelphia Public Ledger's "On Second Thought")

The nomenclature of the cigar trade is one of the very interesting phases of democracy. No gentleman intent upon building up a market for a ten-cent cigar ever named it for a statesman, He complimented, instead, an actor, a philanthropist, a race horse, a hypothetical Indian maiden or a suppositious Spanish grandee. To have named a ten-cent cigar for a statesman would have been to "queer" both the cigar and its involuntary patron. The people would not have stood for that sort of thing. It would have presumed a certain superiority which they would have rebuked both at the cigar stand and at the polls.

Plans To Organise Germans Abroad

Berlin, Dec. 8.—At the Hamburg congress of Germans living or having formerly lived in foreign countries Heinrich Siemer, editor of the Export Herald, proposed forming a world league of Germans, comprising all German individuals, societies, corporations and institutions in all foreign countries, the league to serve German interests in political, economic and scientific directions. For political work only such Germans are to be eligible as have never renounced or lost their German citizenship. For these members the league must secure active and passive election rights in Germany, and German diplomats and other representatives in foreign countries must be charged with taking special care of their interests.

The league, it is pointed out, cannot serve any political interest where Germans who have adopted a foreign nationality or lost their German citizenship are concerned. The latter, however, might be of great service in furnishing economic and cultural information in the countries where they are living and have acquired special knowledge. This material should be collected in Berlin and might become extremely useful for the improvement and growth of German industry and commerce. It is believed that such a league would be specially adapted to advise the German Foreign Office concerning the appointments of the German diplomatic and consular services, as well as to render great service in acquainting Germans at home with the cultural achievements of other countries, and vice versa.

It is recommended that in German societies and institutions other agencies should immediately be formed, whose sole task will be to keep in the closest contact with individual Germans or similar German institutions in foreign countries.

It was at first proposed to form the league immediately, but the congress in Hamburg desires to discuss the proposition more thoroughly.

Senator Carl Wilhelm Petersen, chairman of the Democratic Party and a member of the Reichstag for Hamburg, told The New York Times correspondent that it was not intended to solicit members in America, as that might be a cause of conflict with the United States, but that the league would welcome any relation with German-Americans except political.

Exchange Market

Messrs. Maitland, Fearon and Brand write as follows in their exchange circular for week ending Wednesday, January 12.

Exchange:—The decline in the price of Silver in London during the past week has been steady and continuous, today's prices of 39½d. Spot and 39¾d. forward, being respectively 2¼d. and 2½d. lower than this day last week. Lack of demand owing to this depression in trade generally, coupled with a sharp rise in the New York-London Exchange from 3.56 to 3.73½ is mainly responsible for the decline.

Exchange rates locally have followed the course of Silver, T.T. on London having fallen from 4s. 1½d. to today's rate of 3s. 10d. The market here has ruled dull and lifeless, what steadiness there has been, has only been due to speculative operations. These operations have been mainly in Gold Dollars, in anticipation of an improved cross-rate. The market is steady at the close with sellers at 3s. 11¼d. T.T. Genuine business has again been abnormally small, no improvement in the Export trade being as yet noticeable.
